Rural Partners Network: Building Stronger Futures Together

Through the Rural Partners Network, rural people and communities benefit from collaborative partnerships among an association of federal agencies, staff, and programs.

USDA Rural Development (RD) is leading the Rural Partners Network in collaboration with 25 federal agencies and regional commissions.

What is the Rural Partners Network?

Through the Rural Partners Network (RPN), federal agencies are taking action to transform the way the federal government partners with rural communities to spur inclusive, sustainable economic growth. The RPN creates an alliance of federal agencies and civic partners working to expand rural economic development through job creation, infrastructure development, and community improvement. The RPN strives to provide access to federal programs and funding and help drive local economic development.

With the RPN, federal agencies are renewing their commitment to rural communities by expanding interagency collaboration and providing targeted staffing, tools, and resources.

How is the Rural Partners Network different?

Rural communities sometimes struggle to get financial or technical assistance from highly competitive programs based in individual federal government agencies.

The Rural Partners Network introduces a new way of doing business: a collaboration among federal agencies meant to improve access to government resources, staffing and tools. Participating agencies designate key points of contact who focus specifically on rural strategies, improving visibility and attention to rural issues.

The Rural Partners Network also puts federal staff on the ground to support designated, economically challenged communities. Known as “Community Liaisons,” these federal employees provide local leaders with the expertise to navigate federal programs. Community Liaisons help build relationships and identify additional resources to get the job done. As their work progresses, the lessons learned will impact future federal rural policy development and investment strategies.

RPN field staff are tasked with feeding key information to federal agencies regarding community needs and barriers to accessing federal resources. Agencies will then use this information to drive policy changes to address the unique challenges faced by rural communities. As a result, RPN supports pilot sites and activities, but inform changes that make the federal government better deliver for all rural communities. Through this new, direct line between rural communities and national federal leadership, RPN is working across agencies to coordinate technical assistance to rural communities, share rural data and measures of success, and align grant requirements.

RPN Implementation

RPN has delivered:

1. Hired federal staff to work exclusively in up to 36 rural communities, community networks in multiple U.S. states, Tribal Nations, and territories
2. Introduced a whole-of-government website, <https://www.rural.gov>, dedicated to rural economic development by highlighting federal rural development resources
3. Collaborate with more than 25 federal agencies and regional commissions.

Rural People and Places, Trends and Opportunities

USDA as lead for Rural Partners Network is working hard to ensure America’s rural places can leverage economic recovery resources, generate diversified economic growth, and create prosperity in their communities.

The federal government makes billions of dollars available each year to invest in community and economic development projects and activities. For many communities – particularly the most distressed – these resources can be difficult to identify and access.

Rural places need new, intentionally developed service delivery methods to support rural priorities and objectives. The Rural Partners Network provides such a framework.
